HIKING AND MULTI-USE TRAILS:

BACKBONE TRAIL - ■ 2.5 miles, gold blaze, This is a multi-use trail that runs south from the contact station to the southern part of the park. The trail is open to hiking and biking for its entire length, however equestrians are permitted only south of Black Bear Run. The trail is accessible from the contact station and the Beaver, Woodstock Pond, Laurel Glen, Black Bear Run, Pamunkey, Powhatan Forks, Riverview, White Tail and Me-Te-Kos trails. It passes through hardwood forest rich with wildlife and features many views of the park and surrounding areas.

BEAVER TRAIL - ● .5 miles, silver blaze, The trail is for hiking only and connects the Backbone Trail to the Woodstock Pond Trail near its northern Mattaponi Trail access. This trail crosses a small woodland stream that feeds into the pond and is a great trail for children on their first adventure in the woods.

DOGWOOD LANE TRAIL - ● .8 miles, magenta blaze, This is a multi-use trail that's accessible in two places from the Whitetail Trail since it makes a semi-circle as it passes through the woods, coming out at another point on the Whitetail Trail. This path is narrower than the neighboring trail and is somewhat more scenic.

MAJESTIC OAK TRAIL - ■ .8 miles, white blaze, This multi-use trail is accessible from the Spur Trail and Powhatan Fork Trail. This passes through a woodland environment common in the park. Near its end, the trail passes an oak tree estimated to be between 200 and 400 years old. The tree is believed to be the oldest oak in the park. Past this giant tree and toward the river, the trail is no longer suitable for horses, and riders will need to return to the Spur Trail. Near the York River the trail winds down a steep bank where a bridge crosses the marsh. From the bridge, the trail winds up the bank and becomes the north fork of the Powhatan Fork Trail.

MATTAPONI TRAIL - ● .85 miles, cobalt blue blaze, Accessible in two places from the Woodstock Pond Trail, this trail provides access to the fossil beach where shark teeth and other fossilized material may be found. Named for a native American tribe who once inhabited the area, the trail passes wooded cliffs and across marshes, while providing good views of the York River. South of the fossil beach access, the trail becomes wider and the area becomes grassier. A long bridge spans the marsh at one place and, on either side of it, the trail is fairly steep.

MEH TE KOS BRIDLE TRAIL - ■ 4.5 miles, orange blaze, To access the trail from the horse trailer parking lot, cross the main park road and proceed up Backbone Trail about 200 feet. This trail provides access to the many multi-use trails in the southern part of the park and takes riders along shaded, grassy trails next to fields of wild plants and flowers.

MEH TE KOS CHALLENGE TRAIL - ◆ 1.5 miles, orange blaze, The trailhead is on York River Park Road and can be accessed by following the Meh Te Kos trail to just above the power lines. The trail proceeds through the forest along fairly difficult terrain and loops back to the trailhead.

PAMUNKEY TRAIL - ■ .9 miles, yellow blaze, A multi-use trail accessible from both the Backbone Trail and the Spur Trail, this trail is named for a native American tribe who once inhabited the region. This trail takes users from the Backbone or Spur trail downhill to an observation tower that overlooks the York River. Bikers should use caution as portions of the trail are steep and sandy. The trail passes through forested areas that typify the park.

POWHATAN FORKS TRAIL - ■ .57 miles, beige blaze, A wide, gently downhill sloping trail, it passes mainly through wooded areas and has two forks. The east fork, 1.04 miles, takes users toward the river where there is a bench at the top of a cliff with panoramic views. The north fork, 1.15 miles, takes users into salt marshes. The portion of the trail that connects to the Majestic Oak Trail is not suitable for horses, as it winds into the marsh and crosses a footbridge.

RIVERVIEW TRAIL - ■ 1.5 miles, intense blue blaze, It passes through a wooded area and, not far from the river, is blocked by a fence with a pass-through for hikers only. Bicycle and horseback riders must proceed on foot from this point. The remote location makes it well-suited for observing wildlife. Near the beach, the trail becomes sandy. Observant hikers will spot evidence of the area's wildlife. At the end of the trail, there is seating.

SPUR TRAIL - ● .5 miles, brown blaze, This connects the Powhatan Forks, Majestic Oak and Pamunkey trails. Near its southern end was once the plantation seat of John Blair, a signer of the Constitution.

TASKINAS TRAIL - ■ 2.0 miles, tomato red blaze, The trail is accessed near the horse trailer parking just south of the visitor center. The trail passes through a variety of habitats ranging from field to forest. Hikers may see ospreys and great blue herons from four observation decks built by local Eagle Scouts. A spur leads to a long deck in the middle of Taskinas Creek Marsh where hikers and paddlers may greet one another. This is a trail loop with numerous changes in elevation.

WHITETAIL TRAIL - ■ .75 miles, red blaze, This multi-use trail is accessed from the Backbone Trail and provides subsequent access in two places to the Dogwood Lane Trail. The trail passes through woods bringing users to an area where the trail ends and users must turn around. When combined with the Dogwood Trail, this trail makes an interesting loop through shaded forest. Near the end of the trail, seasonal views of the river may be had through the trees.

WOODSTOCK POND TRAIL - ● .85 miles, dark gray blaze, The trail may be accessed near shelter 3, from Backbone Trail, and from Beaver Trail. This wide dirt and fine gravel trail takes users by the visitor center, then over a dam and around Woodstock Pond, before returning to Backbone Trail. On this trail, users go near sites where the Woods House (1930) and the Henderson House (pre-1817) once stood.
